The Mystery of the Lost Dauphin & DNA

Marie Antoinette, Queen of France, had one surviving son when she died by the guillotine on October 16, 1793. Louis Charles, The Dauphin, had been imprisoned with his mother until July 3, 1793, and then was taken from her arms. The official record reported his death from tuberculosis at the age of 10, but mystery surrounded his fate, and many rumors surfaced about the nature of his death. Some believed he died of neglect or was murdered, but in 1814 the historian of the newly restored monarchy proclaimed that Louis had escaped and was still alive.

In 1846 the mass grave where Louis was recorded to have been buried was exhumed. Just one of the remains in the site showed signs of tuberculosis, but the remains appeared to be from an older boy in his teens. The mystery remained and as time went on, many men claimed to be the prince.

From the Administrator

Dear Project Members,

With summer behind us and Fall settling in, I hope those who have put their research on hold during the warmer months will find that the colder months ahead are a good time to get back to their Webb research. I am pleased to see that several of the Webb DNA groups have formed "mailing lists" of all their members and regularly communicate and share research within their group. After all, they are family and they have a common goal! Please let me know if I can help if there is interest in forming a mailing list for your particular DNA group.

We have exciting news for the John Webb b. 1694 m. Mary Boone DNA line. We have a new member that confirms a DNA connection between John Webb and a Northern Ireland Webb family. This Webb family has been traced back to 1795 and appears to have remained in Northern Ireland except for a recent migration to Canada. This match could provide new clues for researching the John Webb m. Boone line and tracing its origins. Please contact me for details.

“One of the more intriguing aspects of this story involves the heart of Prince Louis. This heart began its long journey when the doctor, Phillippe Jean Pelletan, did the autopsy on the supposed prince and stole his heart and preserved it.”

Although he himself didn't make the claim, many believed the Naturalist, John James Audubon, was the lost prince. He was of the correct age and had been adopted at the correct time, which helped fuel the rumor. One claimant who openly advertised that he was the prince was Eleazer Williams, a descendant of a member of the Mohawk tribe and a son of a woman who had been kidnapped by the tribe. He became a small celebrity for several years with his story, “The Lost Prince.” Eleazer claimed to be Prince Louis even to the end of his life. His skull was exhumed in 1947 and it was concluded that he likely was of Native American descent, thus excluding him from being Louis XVII.

A German clockmaker named Karl Wilhelm Naundorff was so successful at convincing others that he was Prince Louis XVII that the government of Netherlands officially recognized him and allowed him to take the family name – Bourbon. He was able to conjure up convincing childhood memories that meshed with the memories of Louis' childhood nurse. He was eventually excluded from the list of potential Prince Louis' as his DNA did not match Marie Antoinette or any other family member's DNA.

A Boy's Heart

One of the more intriguing aspects of this story involves the heart of Prince Louis XVII. This heart began its long journey when a doctor, Phillippe Jean Pelletan, did the autopsy on the supposed prince. He stole his heart and preserved it. Later, one of the doctor's medical students took it, but was remorseful and returned it to the doctor's wife. She sent it to the Archbishop of Paris where it remained until 1830. When Revolution broke out, the urn that held the heart shattered, but the doctor's son rescued it. The heart was then given to the Bourbon family in Spain and they returned it to Paris where it was eventually placed in the royal crypt at St. Denis Basilica. There it remained until 1999.

In 2000 the heart was tested for mitochondrial DNA [mtDNA] and was compared to DNA taken from the locks of Marie Antoinette's and her sisters' hair, as well as DNA from living relatives: the Queen of Romania and her brother Andre. It was determined that the heart indeed had to have belonged to a family member of Marie Antoinette. However, it could not be determined whether the heart had belonged to a male or female or whether the heart had belonged to a child of Marie Antoinette. It was determined that the heart came from a maternal descendant of Marie Antoinette.

Of course, as these stories go, just the smallest of doubts leaves room for the mystery to continue. Most historians accept the DNA as proof that the heart belonged to the young Dauphin, but the German clockmaker's family has rejected the evidence and continue to use the Bourbon name.

In 2004 the heart was given an official burial and was placed alongside Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette in the Basilica.

Dedicatory ceremonies were well-planned, but the avowed independency or congregationalism of the people made it impossible for those living in the river town [Newark] to assist in exercises. An invitation was extended to the Reverend Joseph Webb, the Presbyterian clergyman recently installed there, to attend, but others joining with him looked upon it [the Mountain Society] as so different from their principles and form of church government that they absolutely refused to ordain a minister for them.

On January 15, 1777, the General Convention voted that Major Thomas Chandler, Mr. Stephen Tide, Mr. Ebenezer Hoisington, Mr. Joshua Webb, Lieut. Dennis Lockland, Mr. Jonathan Bigelow, Col. Thomas Johnson, Mr. Elijah Gates and Nichols White be a committee of war to act in conjunction with the committee of war already chosen. This committee was for the east side of the mountain. At the same time the Convention recommended to each town in Cumberland and Gloucester Counties to choose new committees of safety where the towns were disaffected with the existing committees. The design of this move evidently was to supersede the committees of Tory proclivities.

The first attempt to settle was made by a German by the name of Derick Webb, who came in March 1766, but soon left, and returned in March, 1777. He again left the following May. No permanent settlement was effected until 1784, when Webb and Elijah Woolcot moved in and were followed soon after by others. It has been related that during one of Webb's temporary residences here pending the Revolution he took his children out to Hill's Bay to see the lake, when they were captured by a party of Indians, and Webb was taken to Canada and there detained for several months, while the children were left on the shore. About the same time the Indians visited Mrs. Webb in the cabin, and began to destroy the household effects. Preparatory to burning the house. To her entreaties not to burn the cabin they replied that they must set fire to it, as they were under strict orders to do so, but that they would immediately leave, when she might extinguish it if she wished, which she easily succeeded in doing. Webb's original settlement was probably made in the west part of the town near the Shelburne line, where Colonel Thomas Sawyer made his gallant and victorious fight. It was many years afterwards that he settled near the side of the railroad station.

Webster B. Webb, mining man, son of Theron and Sarah A., was born in Essex count, Vermont, February 28, 1834. He was educated at the Newbury Seminary and engaged as a school teacher three years in Bureau county, Illinois. During the Pike's Peak excitement of 1860, he removed to Colorado and took an active part in the early settlement of that state, serving for three years as a member o Elbert Guards. He spent some time in Salt Lake City, in mining investigations, and went to Placerville, California, where he engaged in mining. Later he was very successful in celebrated Alder Gulch of Montana, and with the money thus obtained engaged in the cattle business, which he successfully conducted for eighteen years. He purchased, in Illinois, large numbers of blooded Clydesdale horses and stallions and came to Cheney September 23, 1882, being one of the pioneers. He engaged in farming and stock-raising and has been very successful. He now owns a nice home and is devoting his energies to mining, owning the Jupiter, in the Florence mining district, in Idaho. This mine shows an eighteen-foot ledge, free milling ore, very rich, and is bonded for six hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Webb is a member of the Cheney Pioneer Society, and a much respected citizen. He was married, April 29, 1872, to Annetta, daughter of Charles and Eleanor Cheney, of Des Moines, Iowa. They have seven children: Nellie, now Mrs. Reuter; Samuel W., Nettie M., Charles L. Alva B., Henry and Theodore. Mr. Webb is a member of Temple Lodge, No. 42, F. A. M., of Cheney, and has been a prominent Mason for the past thirty-seven years.

Dr. W. Q. Webb, physician and surgeon, office in the Green block, a pioneer of 1884, was born in Kentucky in 1863. He was early taken to Tennessee, where he lived until twelve years old, afterwards moving to Colorado. He studied medicine in that state, then practiced a while in Omaha, Nebraska, but soon came to Spokane and opened an office in this city. He has given his undivided attention to the pursuit of his profession here ever since, building up and maintaining a large practice. For many years he has been recognized as one of the leading physicians of the county. He organized the city board of health, of which he was the first president, and for three terms he held the office of county physician. During the past twelve years he has served continuously on the staff of the Sacred Heart Hospital. The Doctor is a very prominent fraternal man, being at the present time identified with seven different secret orders. He is also a member of the State Medical Society and of two county medical associations.
