Saltash Church

The only remaining memorial is a floor slab in an out-of-the-way corner, though it is the oldest and most interesting memorial in the church. It commemorates Edward Webb, an alderman of this corporation, who died 8th October, 1750, aged 48. On it are cut his arms ; viz., A cross with a double-headed eagle displayed in the second quarter. Crest, An ass's head couped. The arms are not quite correct. The eagle should have only one head, and' be placed in the first quarter. The family were descended from Webb, of Exeter, who entered their arms and pedigree at the Heralds' Visitation of Devon in 1620. The arms so entered were. Or, a cross Sa., in the first quarter an eagle displayed of the second. Crest, A hind's head couped ppr. The burial of this Edward "Webb is not entered in the register, though that of his wife, Mrs. Philippa "Webb, is recorded as taking place on the 22nd January, 1768. Also the baptism, the 23rd March, 1744, of Arthur Kelly, son of Edward and Philippa, privately, and confirmed in the chapel on 29th May, 1745. Several entries of others of the name of "Webb occur, but there appears no connection between them. It is rather strange that the arms of the wife of the above Edward Webb are not impaled on the floor slab. She was the second daughter of Arthur Kelly, of Kelly, Esq., by his wife Susanna, daughter and heiress of "William Hancock, of Hendra, in St. Germans, gent.
