Webbs in History:

John Joshua Webb

The life of John Joshua Webb could be summed up as one of a typical frontier outlaw or more accurately a lawman who changed sides for his own gain. However, the events of his short life seem to paint a picture of a man who was looking foremost for adventure, but sadly, made a wrong turn along the way. In many ways his life followed similar paths of the early life of Wyatt Earp, his contemporary, but in the end, Webb wasn't as lucky.

John Joshua Webb was born in 1847 on Valentine's Day in Keokuk Co., Iowa. He was one of 12 children of William Webb Jr. and Innocent Brown. On the 1860 Keokuk Co. census, John J. was listed as 12 years old. By 1863, at the age of 16, he left his home for Colorado and worked in the gold mines in Central City outside of Denver. In 1865 he joined the "Powder River Expedition," a U.S. military campaign against Native Americans in the territory that became Wyoming. He then went briefly to Ford Co., Kansas, but by 1870, the census shows a 21-year-old John Joshua Webb was living in Douglas Co., Colorado and was working as a railroad laborer. By 1871, another move brought him back to Kansas where he became the owner of Bluff Creek Ranch in Sumner Co. just outside of Caldwell. The life of a rancher, for whatever reason, didn't suit him, and in 1872 he sold the ranch to Curly Marshall, a man who would later be known as an outlaw and horse-thief. Either out of necessity or perhaps out of a desire for adventure, Webb continued changing hats. He became the proprietor of a dancing saloon in Caldwell, and was a buffalo hunter out of Dodge City, Kansas. By 1875 he was a US Army Wagon Master at Fort Dodge, one of the important forts along the frontier. Meanwhile, his parents, William and Innocent, were in Jackson Co., Kansas, raising the last of their children.

In 1877, James Joshua Webb was deputized in Dodge City, Kansas and he began to run posses with Sheriff Charlie Bassett and his under-Sherriff, Bat Masterson. One of these posses set out in pursuit of Sam Bass and his gang who had robbed a Union Pacific Train in Big Springs, Nebraska. By 1878, Bat Masterson had been made the new county Sherriff, and in January of that year Masterson, Webb and two other men tracked down and arrested six train robbers. One of these outlaws was “Dirty Dave” Rudabaugh. Although Webb played a big part in Rudabaugh’s arrest by distracting him with conversation so that Masterson could surprise and overtake him, it would be this fateful meeting with Rudabaugh, and a friendship that later formed between them, that in retrospect, would be the turning point in Webb’s life.

Rudabaugh was granted immunity and freedom for testifying in a trial in Butler Co., Kansas. In 1879, Rudabaugh showed up in Dodge City and told Bat Masterson that his outlaw days were behind him. Rudabaugh would go with Bat Masterson and his men [including Webb] when they went to Colorado to defend the Santa Fe in the Royal Gorge War. Rudabaugh’s good intentions, if he ever really had any, were short-lived and it is believed that it was he who influenced Webb to come over to the wrong side of the law.

John Joshua Webb left Dodge City and moved on to Las Vegas, New Mexico, which in 1879 was a booming and dangerous town. Miguel Otero, who would eventually become the Governor of New Mexico, had spent time in Las Vegas during this period and claimed the town had been so treacherous that there had been twenty-nine violent deaths in the town in just one month. Many other men from Dodge City had also made their way to Las Vegas including Henry “Doc” Holliday, David “Mysterious Dave” Mather, Wyatt Earp and Webb’s friend, “Dirty Dave” Rudabaugh. Conflicting accounts make it unclear whether it was John Joshua Webb or a younger man named Jordan L. Webb, also from Iowa, who became co-owner of a gambling saloon with Doc Holliday. In any case, when Doc Holliday was put on trail for a shooting at the saloon, he was acquitted with the help of John Joshua Webb’s testimony.

In 1880, Webb became a Las Vegas lawman. On the 1880 San Miguel Co., New Mexico territory census he is listed as 33 years old and a police officer living in the Las Vegas precinct. Rudabaugh, six years Webb’s junior, also became an officer of the law and together they became members of the infamous “Dodge City Gang.” The gang included men who had positions of power in the community and who worked in unison with outlaws and gamblers to obtain huge profits in the gambling saloons. The leader of the gang was the Justice of the Peace, Hyman “Hoodoo Brown” Neill. Other members were the City Marshall, Joe Carson; Deputy U.S. Marshall, “Mysterious Dave” Mather; police officers, John Joshua Webb and “Dirty Dave” Rudabaugh, along with outlaws, William P. “Slap Jack” Bill Nicholson, John “BS” Jack Pierce, Selim K. Frank Cady and Jordan L. Webb, who on the 1880 census was listed as a prisoner in Santa Fe Co., New Mexico. The outlaws would do the dirty work and the lawman would cover it up.

“The Dodge City Gang” was said to have participated in lynchings, stagecoach and train robberies, cattle rustling and murders.

“Although Webb played a big part in Rudabaugh’s arrest by distracting him with conversation so that Masterson could surprise and overtake him, it would be this fateful meeting with Rudabaugh, and a friendship that later formed between them, that in retrospect, would be the turning point in Webb’s life”

John Joshua Webb's involvement in the gang came to a quick end on March 2, 1880. A man named Mike Kelliher was at the Goodlet and Roberts Saloon and what is fact is that Webb killed Kelliher. The incidents leading up to that fact came into question, as happens in most murders. Webb claimed that he had gone into the saloon to disarm Kelliher who reportedly was illegally carrying a pistol. He said that Kelliher had refused to surrender the gun and instead drew it to shoot, and Webb, in defense, shot him 3 times. Other's said that Webb had been told that Kelliher was carrying $1,900 and Webb's intention was to rob him. Still others said that Hoodoo and others had set Webb up. Webb was arrested, convicted and sentenced to hang.

Webb's friends in Dodge City, including Bat Masterson, had heard of Webb's arrest and took up a collection to help in his defense. The press seemed to be mostly on the side of Webb. Rudabaugh had his own ideas about the situation and forced his way into the jail, killed the jailer, and gave the cell keys to Webb. Webb refused to escape and was given a stay of execution in return. Rudabaugh ran off and joined Billy the Kid's gang. Webb must have had a change of heart because he later planned his own escape. He initially was successful, but was eventually captured near Roswell. Three men died during his escape. Rudabaugh had the same fate, having been captured at Stinking Springs. He was convicted of murdering the jailer and placed in the Las Vegas jail to await his death sentence.

Another year would pass, and in December of 1881, John Joshua Webb, Dave Rudabaugh and five other prisoners escaped through a hole they had chiseled out of the jail wall. Rudabaugh fled to Mexico, but in 1886, was beheaded by a mob in Chihauhua. John Joshua Webb returned to Kansas under the alias "Sam King." He eventually went on to Winslow, Arkansas to work on the railroad. He died in Arkansas in 1882 of smallpox; the adventure had come to an end. He was just 35 years old.

John Joshua Webb never married but "in theory" is represented by the William Webb [b. 1777 VA] DNA Group.

Jordan L. Webb. - No family connection has been found between John Joshua Webb and Jordan L. Webb although both were born in Iowa. They were not brothers as Jordan's father was born in Kentucky and his mother was born in TN. The opposite is true for the parents of John Joshua Webb. In 1910, Jordan Webb, age 53, b. Iowa, was a "lodger" and "odd jobs laborer" in Pasco, Franklin Co., Washington. In 1920 he was an unemployed "roomer," age 60, in Kern Co., California. He was unmarried.

Nebraska

History of Seward County, Nebraska

W. W. Cox, 1888

Rev. J. N. Webb

The veteran preacher of Seward county, and probably of our state, was born in Jefferson county, N. Y., in 1811. Commenced preaching in 1832, fifty-six years ago, and has been in active work of the ministry ever since. In 1834 was settled as pastor of the church at Smithsville, where he labored five years; was pastor for six years at Carthage; was twenty years at work in the St. Lawrence Association, then three years at Titusville, Pa., when he came to Nebraska in the interest of home missions, and in that work he traversed Nebraska through and through for nine years, at all times of year and in all kinds of weather. Whether in the scorching sun of mid-summer or the chilling blasts of winter blizzards, he was ever about his Master's work, visiting and encouraging feeble churches and rendering them aid and encouragement, and gathering the scattered membership together and establishing churches. When he was baptized his pocket-book was baptized with him, and his life and all that he possessed was consecrated to the Master's use, and while his financial talent has been most remarkable for a minister, he has distributed it among the poor. Has from his own purse scattered in the mission work ten thousand dollars in Nebraska alone. Since 1879 he has labored for feeble churches and the educational interests of his people. Shall we state to what denomination Elder Webb belongs? Perhaps so, but it is more important to know that his long and valuable life has been wholly given to preaching the everlasting Gospel of Christ to the people, and while the Missionary Baptist church is his home, yet his field of usefulness was in the world, and his work has been wonderfully blessed. He is yet in the harness, and is a tower of strength holding aloft the Standard of the Cross among the people. He first visited Seward in 1869, and this has been a part of hi field of labor since that date, and he has made Seward his home for the last two years having been pastor of Seward church.

History of Gage Co. Nebraska

Hugh J. Dobbs, 1918

Joseph Luther Webb, MD

Large, definite, and benignant was the impress which this honored pioneer left in connection with this history of Gage county, and no work purporting to give record concerning those who have here been the vigorous apostles of civic and material development and progress can be consistent with itself if there is failure to accord and earnest tribute of recognition to Dr. Webb. He was one of the very first physicians to establish residence and engage in practice in the little frontier community which was the nucleus of the present city of Beatrice, and it has well been said that “all through the rest of his life he was closely associated with every movement looking toward the development, growth, and social and material well-being of the community.

Dr. Webb was born on a pioneer homestead farm near the city of Springfield, Illinois, and the date of his nativity was August 1, 1837. He was a son of Luther Hiram Webb and Martha [Bellows] Webb, both representatives of sterling families that were founded in New England in the early colonial period of our national history. The doctor was the sixth in order of birth in a family of seven children and the youngest of the number was Hiram P., who likewise became prominently identified with pioneer activities in Gage county, Nebraska. Concerning the early period in the career of Dr. Webb the following record has been prepared, and it is worthy of perpetuation in this connection: “When the Doctor was but ten years old his father and elder brother died, only a day apart, leaving the widowed mother and the surviving children on the pioneer homestead. In the face of most strenuous hardships and trials the devoted mother struggled to keep her family together and saw to it that each child was cared for and afforded the best educational advantages offered in that pioneer locality, the capital city of Illinois having been a mere village at that time. After having availed himself of the advantages of the local schools, Dr. Webb went to Springfield, the state capital, and there he prosecuted his study of medicine in the offices of several of the leading physicians of that place, this method of preliminary training having been commonly in vogue in the locality and period. At this time Abraham Lincoln, Stephen A. Douglas and many other men who attained to eminence were residing in Springfield, and the ambitious young student came to an appreciable extent under their influence, his life ever afterward having shown the strong characteristics that such association tended to develop. With characteristic ambition and zeal Dr. Webb pursued his medical studies and finally he found it possible to enter the Eclectic Medical Institute in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, and institution of celebrity at the time and one notable for leadership in the development of medical reform and advancement, - one that continues to the present day as a strong and influential school of medicine. In this college the Doctor was graduated as a member of the class of 1871 and in the same year he established his permanent residence in Gage county, which he had previously visited. In 1867 the new country represented in Nebraska, which was admitted to statehood in that year, was being much talked about and exploited in the eastern states, and a group of young men from the vicinity of Springfield, Illinois, and including Dr. Webb and his brothers, decided to pay a visit to this new land of promise. Accordingly, they set forth, and they made the trip partly by state, partly by rail, partly on horseback, and for a considerable distance on foot, gaining much from each experience. Before returning the Webb brothers has acquired in Gage county a tract of land, as an investment. They then returned to their home in Illinois and after having prepared himself thoroughly for the work of his chosen profession Dr. Webb reverted to the favorable impression which Nebraska had made upon him, with the result that, in 1871, he came to Gage county and established himself as one of the pioneer physicians and surgeons in the embryonic city of Beatrice.

“The country was sparsely settled and the practice of medicine must needs be carried on without the aid of any of the modern conveniences, such as laboratories, hospitals, telephones, automobiles, consultants, and stores where needed appliances could be obtained...

...Associating themselves with other representative citizens, Dr. Webb and his brother Hiram P. were closely identified with the early development of the community...

...On the 2d of October, 1873, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Webb to Miss Kate Louise Sheppard, daughter of G. W. Sheppard, who had come with his wife and children from England to America in the preceding year and who established a home in Gage county...In conclusion of this memoir is given brief record concerning the children of Dr. and Mrs. Webb, the latter continuing to occupy the attractive old homestead in the city of Beatrice and being an earnest member of the Episcopal church: Hiram L., eldest of the children, now resides near the city of Binghamton, New York; James Edgar died in infancy; Dr. Joseph Lewis Webb is individually mentioned elsewhere in this volume; and Kate L. remains with her widowed mother, being prominent in women's activities of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal church of Beatrice and also in the local and national affairs of the Young Women's Christian Association, the while she is a popular figure in the representative social life of her native city.

Oklahoma Webb Men in the First World War:

“Thomas W. Webb, son of William and Kittie D. Webb, was born in Greenfield, Okla., Aug. 8, 1898, and educated in the public schools of Oklahoma. He entered the service July 25, 1918, and received his military training at Balboa Park, San Diego, Calif.; did not go overseas and received his discharge at Camp Pike in June, 1919.”

“Robert Webb, Private First Class, son of Mrs. Hattie L. Webb, Greenfield, Okla., was born in Arkansas, March 24, 1896; educated in the public schools of Oklahoma. He entered the service in June, 1917, and underwent an intensive military training at Camp Travis, Texas; embarked overseas June, 1918, and landed in France; participated in the engagements at S. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne, Company M, 357th Infantry, 90th Division; uninjured. Received his discharge at Camp Pike, in June, 1919.”

“Sergeant Samuel Wortha Webb. Son of J. D. and Mary Webb, Ardmore, Okla., was born in Fannin County, Texas, December 11, 1880. On September 6, 1917, he answered his country's call, and was sent to Camp Travis to train with Co. K, 357th Infantry, 90th Division. Here he remained until they received their overseas orders, sailing in June, 1918, for France. After arriving in France, they trained intensively, learning the French methods of warfare, and taking special instruction in Gunery, Signaling and Physical Drills, training to use he gas masks to which they must necessarily become accustomed in order to avoid being overcome with the poison gases – one of the inventions of German Kultur...

Here the 90th showed their metal, and with the other Divisions on this line of almost impregnable fortifications of barbed wire entanglements, deep wide trenches of masonry and machine gun fire from the Germans from their commanding position they fought valiantly with that persistence and determination which characterizes the American soldier, until they drove back the Boche, and showed the world they were able to accomplish what they undertook to do. In this battle Sergeant Webb was struck by a machine gun bullet and was killed September 14, 1919; one of the many boys from that regiment who gave their lives on that day for the great cause for which they fought.”

The Webb Bulletin is a monthly newsletter for members of the Webb Surname DNA Project and is NOT produced for mass circulation or for profit. If there are questions about any of the transcriptions, please refer to the original source[s]. Records provided in this publication should be used for research purposes only. The Webb Bulletin should NOT be cited as a source in any publication or website. For publication purposes and for documentation, always go to and consult the original source. The editor of this publication cannot be responsible for errors in transcription. In most cases, but not all, the original spelling was adhered to.

I welcome any suggestions or requests for future issues!
